

TRADE UPDATE

On January 17th, 2019 the Innealta Capital investment team rebalanced the Sector Rotation Portfolio (“SRP”) to reflect the opportunity set within the U.S. equity markets. The current portfolio reflects two key themes of positive corporate and macroeconomic growth and value opportunities within small capitalization equities. Across broad sectors, the portfolio increased allocations to the Healthcare, Consumer Staples, and Technology sectors while the portfolio decreased allocations in the Energy and Financials sector as well as defensive fixed income. The investment team elected to decrease the allocations to the Energy given the weakness in commodities prices and increase the allocation to the Healthcare sector given improving earnings sentiment and relative price momentum. The portfolio maintains a positive view on small capitalization equities relative to large capitalization equities given the gap between the respective earnings yields. Within fixed income allocations, the portfolio decreased its allocation to short maturity debt (less than 2 years) in favor of medium maturity debt (5-10 years). These changes slightly increased the weighted-average duration, from 2.31 years to 3.03 years, yet the portfolio’s duration remains significantly less than the duration of the Bloomberg Barclays U.S. Aggregate bond index (7.10 years). SRP maintains overweights, relative to the Innealta Capital internal benchmark, in small cap equities, Financial, and Energy, while keeping underweights in Defensive Fixed Income, Industrials, and Consumer Staples.

OVERVIEW

Themes

- Macroeconomic growth and earnings growth remain positive and supportive of risk assets
- Small capitalization equities relative to large capitalization equity offer value opportunities
- Sovereign fixed income yields offer low expected return given low yields

Portfolio implications

- Prefer equities over fixed income
- Prefer Financials, Energy, and Consumer Discretionary sectors
- Prefer shorter duration debt rather than longer duration debt
